"Uncle Albert, We are so sorry to know that you are gone and left us here to sing your song. How did it go? I remember! "Poor Albert he is dead and gone. He left us here to sing his song…pretty little girl with a red dress on…Poor Albert, He's dead…He is gone…RIP Uncle Albert!"

- Emil 2023

I never met Emil's Uncle Albert but they say he was never right after the war and for some odd reason wore women's clothes to Church on Sundays and did his upmost to firth with the Bishop. Well, that is never mind to Emil's newest effort as Emil remembers him in the days before we were Shanghaied to the war and they got him trying to free us from our jail cell with a crowbar…after thirty days they sent him on the next boat and the rest (I guess) is the start of his sad tale which ended when his high-heels caught a crack, he tripped and a passing metro bus did him in.

For some odd reason, he was fond of Emil and after his death, the family shipped Albert's old steamer trunk to Emil as being Albert's request in his will. Buried deep amongst souvenirs from his pre-war travels was a carefully wrapped scrapbook and random postcards which Emil quickly transferred to his own equally ragged steamer trunk where they stayed until just recently.

As we are approaching the anniversary of his tragic passing, Emil collected them all together and decided to make a buck or two in memory of poor Uncle Albert….to afford a good bottle of wine to toast his passing. When, I quizzed him on the proper morals of such an act; Emil telexed me back: "Poor Albert! You know, he is dead…have you forgot that he is gone but, he did leave us his stuff so that we might afford a rather nice bottle of wine – otherwise, we might give insult his ghost with a toast made with 7/11 Store Boones Farms Wine Cooler or worse…a bottle of that ugly, fowl tasting Thunderbird." On that level, how is one to argue otherwise without seeming to be a proud soy boy or his angry, bio-metrical gender's study major gal that he wrongly imagines is his girlfriend…Trust me, I get mail from them most every day complaining about the Starving Artist formally know as Emil. I will leave it at that….the postcards are ancient and on that accord worth the small price of admission. Enjoy!!!

Albert by most accounts was a troubled man but, in reality, I truly believe that they were referring to the post war Albert. The pre-war Albert was a funny guy who could sway you with his many bold tales of madcap adventure across parts of the world that I am not sure made it onto the era's maps.
He could go on all day and way into the night without never a clue that he had repeating even one tale.
He was the only one who tried to save us from a rouge military recruiter and for that, it ruined his life as Seine talked about. He was a man with no question as to his gender and is was one of only a handful who would elect to stand tall with two young drunks and attempt to free them from the precinct drunk tank with a crowbar he seems to have borrowed without permission. The post-war Albert, I tend to overlook because of the brutal time that he suffered in the 3rd Battle of Verdon which saw him as the only one of his regiment to walk off the field of battle.

Afterwards they gave him a chest full of metals, snapped him on the back and shipped him home once his commander discovered that he had gone mad. In those days, madness was frowned upon as so many upper class trust fund babies had used it as an excuse to sit out the war or serve in some inactive home guard unit that would only be activated if the Jerrys had taken London's stock exchange or financial district (they would surely fight to save the source of their trust fund monies).

I will leave it at that and assemble the postcards he collected from one of his last travels in 1912 shortly before the start of the First Great Industrial Slaughter (which your history books have mislead and lied to you by naming it as the Great War).

1912 was a rather weird time as I clearly do remember with the great powers still at peace with one another but, all anyone (regardless of the country or land) could talk about was the going war.

"Who was going to win? However one answered, there was sure to be an ugly rowel and usually a few days in the drunk tank afterwards.

In those days, "Woke" was the coward who hid behind the bar or who might have even been the bloke who call the constable.

In those days, most of them soy boys and their lesbian gal pals never came around the pubs, they were usually gone to Paris and sat about complaining about society while sipped green Chinese Tea in an expensive salon.

Regular readers will already be hip to the multiverse and my own background with the Mystery School of Alexandra (The Home Study Course) but, you will not know that it was my Uncle Albert who paid my tuition for my studies and who after many years of bold adventure to forbidden monasteries him to earn his honorary citizenship in the 6th Level of the 12 levels of the multiverse - which allowed him free passage throughout the lower rehems of the multiverse and a 10% discount at their gift shops.

For many years I held this collection in secure safeguard as I know the Mister Steiner was correct that CIS Humanity had blown its first opportunity to gain a similar level of access as Albert to the Multiverse back in the 1910's when my Uncle Albert stumbled into one of Mister Steiner's sponsored workshops. Mister Steiner warned that the next limited offer would not be until this current age as a means to help prevent the 3rd World War.
So, I dutifully held this collection of postcard souvenirs that my Uncle Albert acquired (randomly) from the many gift shops that he said lined the road in-and-about the Stat Gate Portals of every level.

Albert believed that I would use these to silently assist the urgent efforts to offer CIS Humanity's Scientific Community previously forbidden technology like "Zero" Free Energy in an effort to put an end to the energy wars that were dragging the world to the brink of destruction.

Personally, I question the wisdom of this grail adventure for I do remember that the "White Hands" believed that CIS Humanity had learn their lesion(s) of not heeding the Steiner warnings prior to the First Industrial Mass Slaughter (you call WW1) and attempted to gain the ears of like minded scientists by offering "Zero" Point Energy and instead they used the technology to create nuclear weapons.

They were wrong then and I truly doubt that their grandchildren will not try to do the same and create even more fearful weapons.

Still, I am honored bound as a proud, card-carrying Jesuit of Truth and so, I conned Seine into agreeing to finance this as a memorial to my late, dear uncle Albert wherever he may now live in the Multiverse – as you see, like the Navaho Indians and our Great Guru, Shara, always reminds us that no one actual dies; it is only that our harmonic frequency changes us and we wake up somewhere else in the multiverse unless, you are real naughty, then, you wake up in a transit camp awaiting deportation to a FEMA

Re-Education Camp or so, I have been told people who would know. Either way, it does give you something to think about on those long, cold winter nights with no heat thanks to the WEF Goonies of Ahriman shut down all power plants to help usher in Ahriman's lofty dream of taking CIS Humanity back to a 13th Century Rural, Feudal Society where you will have nothing but, he claims you will be happy to sit in your cold flat and dream of the golden age where you had everything but were unhappy. No joke!
